Time to celebrate

Antioch Aqua Center hits milestone mark

By JESSICA JACOBSEN jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH - With summer just around the corner, residents in Antioch can look forward to the Antioch Aqua Center opening, which is Saturday, May 31. But this year the residents of Antioch have something extra to get ready for this Antioch Parks and Recreation Director Laurie Stahl has planned a luau to celebrate the pool's 50th anniversary.

"I just thought it would be a fun thing," Stahl said.

The luau will be from 8 to 10 p.m. Friday, June 6, and is something for the entire family, Stahl said. Stahl said the aqua center has a teen pool bash every year, but she thought this year it would be nice to open it up to families. The rain date is June 13.

Even though Stahl is excited about the 50th anniversary celebration, she found out it might be a couple of years too late. A resident showed Stahl some documents that show the pool is actually 52 years old, not 50.

"Since we missed the 50th birthday we're going to celebrate it this year," Stahl said.

Whether it's 50 or 52 years old, the Antioch Aqua Center has long exceeded its life expectancy. Stahl said the average public pool life span is 25 years.

"It's just good maintenance," Stahl said about its extended years of operation.

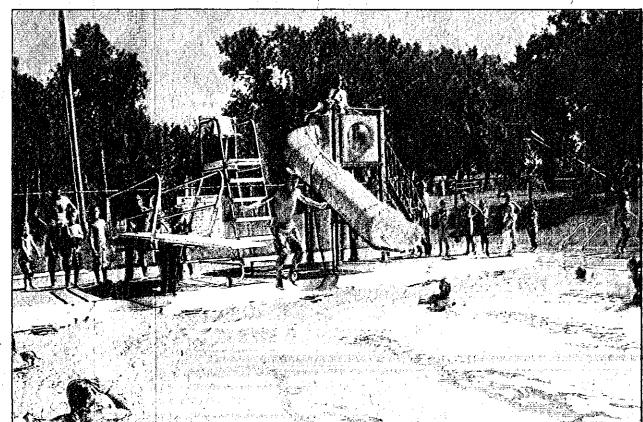

Stahl credits the years of the pools service to Ron Horton, maintenance foreman for Antioch Parks and Recreation.

'He puts some tender loving care [into it]," Stahl said about Horton's

With how long the aqua center has been in service, Horton said, he's seen many changes. Those changes include the removal of the high-dive.

As of now the opening of the aqua center is on schedule, Stahl said, and she hopes the aqua center will continue to service Antioch as long as it can.

"We'll try to keep it going every year," she said.

Don't close your eyes on this roller coaster

I've been a fan of roller coasters since I was a 6-year-old and rode the Hurricane at some now-defunct Florida theme park I can't even remember the name of that probably got closed because they let 6-year old kids on roller coasters.

I threw up immediately afterwards.

It was fantastic.

Since then, I've rode just about every type of roller coaster there is inverted, standing up, wooden, gliding, backwards, looping, watery. You name it, I've probably been on it.

Residents help out Ladies Auxiliary

Fundraiser collects money, items for soldiers' care packages

By JOSEPH MULLER antioch@weeklyjournals.com

ANTIOCH - After getting exemplary service at his local veteran's hospital for back pain, Mark Kartheiser decided he wanted to give back to the military by running a care-package event for local soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan.

On May 24 at the Antioch Veteran of Foreign Wars (VFW) Building, his program collected items to mail overseas through the "Adopt a Package" program ran by the Ladies Auxiliary - an organization of Antioch women created to support the troops.

For the "Adopt a Package" program, the Ladies Auxiliary collects donations and mails them to troops from the Lake County area. Kartheiser's effort to support American troops is one of many shared by other groups in the -Antioch community.

Wal-Mart has donated Christmas and playing cards to the Ladies Auxiliary, ACE Hardware had given C batteries for soldier's gun lights. Students from Antioch high, middle, and elementary schools have made cards and letters for soldiers in Iraq. Local clubs - like the VIP Lounge, the Rotary Club, the Woman's Club, the Lake County Bar-Owner's Association, Boy and Girl Scout Troops, and the Lions Club have given items, money, and their time to the Ladies Auxiliary.

"They all want to support out troops," said Barbara Grey, Ladies Auxiliary president.

The "Adopt a Package" program started in 2006 with only a few local soldiers found through the Internet. Now the program mails items to 30 troop units in all divisions of the US military.

We can't do it ourselves any more," Grey said. "Every bit we get

At Kartheiser's care-package

Barbara Gray, of Antioch and Ladies Auxiliary president of VFW Post 4551, holds her yellow ribbon, "Support Our Troops" sign, to bring in people to help raise money for the Care Package Drive for Troops at the Antioch VFW Post 4551. Proceeds go to the Ladies Auxiliary to send care packages to American soldiers in Iraq and Afghanistan. The event was put together by Mark Kartheiser, of Antioch, an Army veteran who served during Desert Storm.

event, support could be felt throughout the community as people donated items and money.

"People were honking their horns as they went by," Kartheiser

Grey said the care-package event brought in useful items for the troops.

"The drop off items for this event were good," she said.

However, as the economy drags and gas prices rise, the cost of delivering items has gone up. The cost of sending items escalated from $8.95 in 2006 to $10.95 in 2008, Grey said. To cover rising shipping costs, charity events will raise money alongside the care packages. Kartheiser's care-package event had auctions. raffles, and a benefit bike run to raise money.

During Kartheiser's care-package event, people could learn first hand the thankfulness of their troops through letters and pictures lining the walls of the Antioch VFW. A letter written by 1st Lt. Michael Beslow thanked the Ladies Auxiliary for the items they sent. Some groups of soldiers sent an American flag with their signatures as a thank you.

Grey also has read stories about her organization's items helping troops in letters sent to her.

"One soldier put a tampon from our care packages in his friend's bullet wound to help stop the bleeding," Grey said. "He was told it saved his friend's life."

The items ranged from the necessities like food to entertainment items like playing cards.

"Simple things we take for granted, they don't," Grey said.

"Items from home mean the world to them," said John Rocker, a Navy veteran with 20 years of serv-

Grey said the Ladies Auxiliary has raised an estimated $15,000 in donations since the program started.

The pool is going to open Saturday, May 31, but Mother Nature is making it difficult to enjoy it.

After a warm Memorial Day weekend, I was ready for some pool weather, but it looks like that won't be the case anytime soon.

ANTIOCH - Emmons Grade School is saying goodbye to Matt Tabar after his 18year stay as school superintendent. Tabar, who began working at Emmons in 1990, was honored with a ceremony at Emmons on May 20. Friends, family, and members of the community were in attendance, as well as students of Tabar Tabar said throughout his stay at Emmons, the children were his favorite part of the job.

"Whenever I feel like I need to be picked up a little bit, I just walk down the hall." Tabar said.

The ceremony took place in the gymnasium, which was built during Tabar's stay at Emmons. The gym was named Tabar Gymnasium in his Tabar was greeted with plaque, a scrapbook containing pictures of Tabar throughout the years, the retiring of Tabar's jersey, and a wall of pictures drawn by students saying why they like Tabar.

The plaque contained a picture of Tabar as well as his motto, "is it good for the

"If it's good for kids, we can find a way to do it," Tabar said. "If not, why do we even bother?"

Tabar said a superintendent normally stays at a school for three or four years, but that he is very happy with his elongated stay at Emmons.

T've never once regretted that this has been my home or my place," Tabar said.

Tabar said that during his stay at Emmons he formed so many good memories that it is hard to pick out a favorite.

Students of Tabar thought Eighth-grader differently. Gray Dragin said his fondest memory of Tabar was when he brought snow cones in for students so that they could get a taste of summer during the middle of winter.

Fellow eighth-grader Cade England said he will remember Tabar as being always involved.

During Tabar's tenure at Emmons, there were two additions to the school. The additions occurred in 1994 and Tabar said he was proud of the additions not because of the bricks, but the manner in which they were done. Tabar was especially proud that the 2005 addition was done without having to raise taxes.

Tabar said his plans for retirement are up in the air. Tabar said he would like to spend some time with his family. He said he also will use some of his free time to go golfing and fishing.

High school hosts event to showcase McMillen Field

By JESSICA JACOBSEN jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

ANTIOCH - McMillen Field at Antioch Community High School is ready for use, and high school officials want to show it to the public.

The school will host Sequoit Summer, an event at the high school that will celebrate the field opening and bring the community together, Antioch Principal Mike Nekritz said.

"It's a big day," he said. "Hopefully, it goes well."

The big day begins at 10 a.m. Saturday, May 31, and will have events going on until dusk.

Nekritz said officials had talked about having an event to showcase the fields as well as make it a huge community

"There's really something for every age group," he said.

For kids, the activities include face painting, a carnival, a 5K run, a free-throw shooting competition, a basketball tournament, and camps/clinics for soccer, dance and tennis.

For adults and teens, the activities include a 5K race. lessons for golf, a tennis clinic, and tournaments for softball, flag football, field hockey, basketball, and volley-

In addition to activities to entertain patrons, there also will be music performances by the Antioch Community High School Choir, Jamie Buckley, The August, and Voodoo Cadillac.

"It was a lot more work than I thought I'd be," Nekritz said about planning the event.

But if all goes well, Nekritz is hoping to make this something the school will host every year.

This is really a great way to show off what we have in Antioch," Nekritz said.

Nekritz said he is hoping for 3,000 to 4,000 people to show up at Sequoit Summer. 'Hopefully it can be a really fun day," he said.

Antioch native wins student writing award

WHITEWATER, Wis. - Antioch native Crystal Juzwik won second place at the 2008 UW-Whitewater Superior Student Writing Award Ceremony.

Juzwik, a junior English major, submitted her work "In the Wake of the Day (Poems)" in the Introductory Creative Writing Upper Division category.

The Angela Peckenpaugh Superior Student Writing Awards are given out yearly and are separated into multiple categories and divisions. The awards are split into upper division and first year. The categories reflect a wide range of writing disciplines. There are awards for poetry, prose, research papers and response essays.

There are awards for both fall and spring. This year's ceremony was April 17 at the Fern Young Terrace in the Greenhill Center of the Arts.

Reimbursement possible for Antioch schools

SPRINGFIELD - In response to a loss of revenue by Antioch District 117, State Rep. JoAnn Osmond, R-Antioch, sponsored legislation that passed the Illinois House of Representatives that ensures the district gets paid for providing education to students receiving treatment from a local residential facility. Senate Bill 2042 was drafted in response to Antioch Community High School District 117 that provides education for students who are enrolled in the Gateway Youth Care Foundation, a local residential facility that offers treatment for alcohol and drug dependencies. The bill clarifies the funding source for students receiving education from the school district, where the Gateway foundation resides.

"The Antioch school district suffered a financial burden after the Rockford School District 205 stopped reimbursing the school for educational services to Rockford students placed at the Gateway residential facility through the court system," said Osmond. "This legislation will help the district receive payment for educating out-of-district students dating back to July 2007."

The legislation establishes the funding structure for students who receive educational services at residential facilities. The school district where the student's parents reside must accept financial responsibility for the costs of educational services provided to the student,

The legislation, which was also sponsored by Sen. Michael Bond, D-Graysłake, was approved by both the Senate and. House and now awaits the governor's signage into law.

County Tech Campus students to compete

Shane Zobel of Antioch will be one of 12 students from the Lake County High Schools Technology Campus attending the National Skills USA conference to be in Kansas City, Mo., from June 23 to 28. Zobel will compete in the advertising design competition. SkillsUSA is a partnership of students, teachers and industry representatives; working together to ensure America has a skilled workforce. This national organization serves teachers and high schools students who are preparing for careers in technical, skilled and service occupations, including health occupations. It emphasizes total quality at work; high ethical standards, superior work skills, life-long education, and pride in the dignity of work. The 12 Lake County High School Technology Campus students have all achieved a first place at the State of Illinois Conference that was in Springfield last month.

Osmond bill approved by House, Senate

SPRINGFIELD - Standing up for local taxpayers, State Representative JoAnn Osmond, R-Antioch, announced that legislation prohibiting villages from hiring legal counsel separate from the village attorney will go to the governor to be signed into law.

"There is no need to hire a separate attorney using taxpayer money when there is already a qualified village attorney on the payroll. This legislation would ensure that public funding is not being wasted. If a trustee feels the need for separate counsel, then he or she should use their own money to pay for it," Osmond said.

House Bill 4182 recently , passed the House and the Senate, with the help of Sen. William Petersen, R-Buffalo Grove, applies to villages with a strong mayor form of government.

The legislation would prohibit taxpayer money to be used to hire separate and individual lawyers for each trustee to advise them on municipal ordinances, unless the village attorney is disqualified from or excuses himself or herself from representing the member in the official capacity.

For more information, please call Rep. Osmond's district office at 847-838-6200.

Fifteen-year-old Taylor Granitz of Lake Villa sits with a photo of her doctor, Robert Spetzler, and her teddy bear, Corduroy. In March 2006, Granitz was diagnosed with Giant Tumefactive Perivascular Spaces. A fundraiser for Granitz will take place Saturday, May 31, at the Antioch VFW.

Teen battles sickness

Fundraiser for high schooler at Antioch VFW

By DANI SCHWEIGERT dschweigert@nwnewsgroup.com

GRAYSLAKE - Growing up, Taylor Granitz, 15, was a healthy child, and she loved things most children enjoy, including gymnastics and playing softball. But in March 2006, her world changed.

About three years ago, Granitz, a student at Grayslake North High School, starting hearing wind in her ear; and a short time later she began shaking. Her mother, Tami Doyle, brought her to the doctor and was told nothing could be found. But an MRI later revealed that Granitz, of Lake Villa, has Giant Tumefactive Perivascular Spaces, which means she has 12 or more cysts on her brain.

The condition causes Granitz to have tremors, fatigue, muscle spasms, headaches, vision loss and also affected her muscle control of the right side of her body.

"She's an amazing child," Doyle said. "For all she's gone through, she tries to stay positive and upbeat." To help Granitz and her family with medical and travel costs, the family's Beautiful hurch Savior Lutheran Church in Antioch, along with Thrivent Financial for Lutherans, will host a fundraiser for Granitz from 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday, May 31, at the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Antioch. For $5, participants can enjoy a dinner, a bake sale, a silent auction, raffles and live music.

'When you see a young person with medical needs, it makes you want to give them a hand and help them out," said Brian Luedke, financial associate with Thrivent Financial and a member of Granitz's church. "It's why we're here - to make a difference in other people's lives."

Luedke said the goal of the fundraiser is to raise about $5,000.

He added that $585 was raised from a recent car wash fundraiser for Granitz, and Thrivent Financial will match what is raised from both fundraisers.

Having the community come together to help has made a world of difference, Doyle said.

"It's been a big relief," she said. "Sometimes it seems like there's no end in sight, and when someone offers to help, it's like a big burden has been lifted." And Doyle certainly felt that burden about two years ago when Granitz had a shunt placed in her brain to relieve some of the pressure the cysts were causing.

Doyle said Granitz started

December, when Dr. Robert Spetzler operated on some of the cysts in her brain. Granitz attends Grayslake North High School.

Want to help?

What: A fundraiser for Taylor Granitz, a Grayslake North High School student

When: 5 to 9 p.m. Saturday, May

Where: Veterans of Foreign Wars, 75 North Ave. in Antioch

Activities: Food, bake sale, silent auction, raffles and live music from the church choir Chosen and the blues group Voodoo Cadillac Cost: $5

For more information: Call 847-249-1531

to complain of other symptoms and nearly died last year because the shunt was contaminated.

Feeling like there was no hope, Doyle was relieved when someone gave her an article about another Taylor, Taylor Radtke of Johnsburg, Radtke, 8, had a brain tumor that most doctors said was inoperable, but neurosurgeon Dr. Robert Spetzler in Arizona was willing to try. Doyle said he saved Radtke, and she contacted him to help Granitz.

Spetzler performed surgery on Granitz in December, which was her fifth surgery in less than two years, Doyle said. Granitz's symptoms then decreased, but have been slowly returning, and she will most likely need to have more surgeries in the future. Her sixth surgery is in the planning stage.

Others are working to help Granitz as well. Pastor Darald Gruen, with Beautiful Savior Lutheran Church, said he wanted to have the fundraiser in Antioch for the family in part because he knows what it's like to have a sick child. His daughter Laura was born with a brain tumor.

"We've been able to sit and talk, and I think we understand what they're going through," Gruen said.

Granitz said Laura gave her a friend to help her through the rough times - a teddy bear named Corduroy, who travels with Granitz.

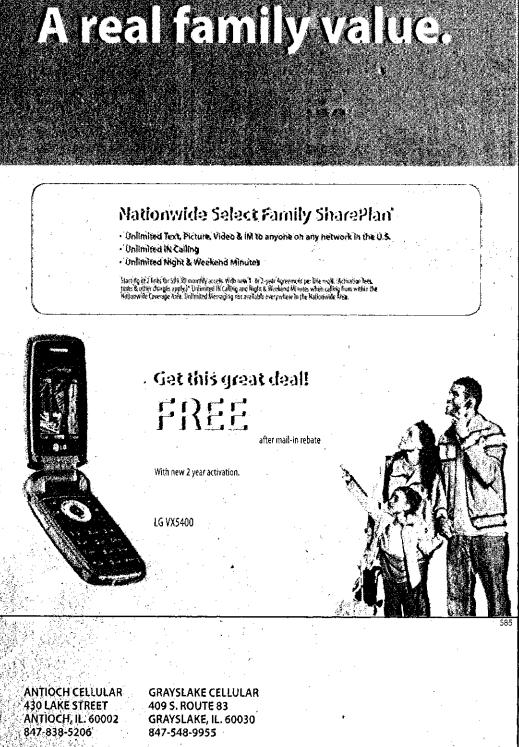

The Make-A-Wish Foundation also will help Granitz. Next month, the teen will be 16, and to help her celebrate, Make-A-Wish will send her to Paris and London.

"I'm really excited,"
Granitz said. "I can't wait to go to Europe."

Granitz said she's most looking forward to going to Euro Disney

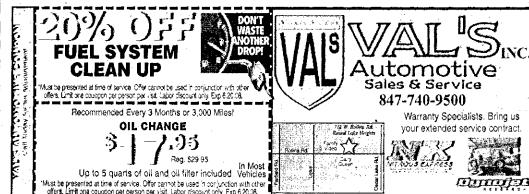

With her bright smile and friendly personality, it can be easy to forget what Granitz has been through. But she's learned something from everything she's undergone.

"Be positive," she said. "And don't let anybody get you down."

A tribute to the Sweet, Late Doris

We all know someone like the Sweet, Late Doris. Couldn't be on time if you hung a kitchen clock around her neck. Sweeter than cotton-candy, but filled with just as much fluff. Still, promises she'll always be there for you.

So when you're pulling on your pantyhose and accidentally tumble over, smacking your head on the corner of the night stand, you phone her for help just before you pass out. Calling Doris in a crisis is no doubt the result of a brain injury.

Two hours later you are nearly comatose on the floor, but wake up to "Yoohoo, I'm here.

Yep, that's her - the person who offered to make an appetizer for your dinner party. But instead you ate her meatballs along with the chocolate cake for dessert because dinner was at 5, and she arrived at 8, meatballs in tow. (Yes, you told her dinner was at 3.)

And, she's the same woman who nearly misses her daughter's wedding ceremony because 12:30 and 2:30 are synonymous to her. As the bride and groom stand at the altar exchanging vows, she hobbles into the church, the back of her dress unzipped, rollers tumbling out of her hair, and her right shoe in her hand.

Of course Doris is always the one who chirps, "Let's do lunch." You know if you make plans for noon, it could be twilight before she arrives. Still, there was the one time she came at 12:20, so

You arrive 30 minutes after the specified time, carrying "Anna Karenina," and settle in. You're so engrossed in chapter three that you are startled when a server taps your shoulder. She says, "I was told to look for a red-haired lady and give her a message that her friend will be late. Is that you, because your hair is more silver than red? "

"It was all red when I came in," you

You realize it's now 3 p.m. and call Doris's cell phone. You figure she must be on her way, but nothing happens on the other end. Finally, 90 minutes later she arrives, her mouth moving at a frenzied pace.

"I've lost my cell phone," she spurts. "I found it in the freezer, and I tried calling from the car, but the darn icy phone wouldn't work. And then I stopped at the mall, but forgot where I parked and security had to drive me around."

"You have a yellow Hummer," you remind her. "How could you lose that?" "Never mind," she says. "I'm starved, Let's order lunch." "It's dinner time," you say, as families pour into the restaurant.

What does a person do after suffering a traumatic brain injury? Where can one turn when he or she no longer is able to hear people on the telephone?

A local organization has answers to those questions and more."

The Lake County Center for Independent Living in Mundelein is a nonprofit group that seeks to empower disabled people, so they can be self-sufficient.

More than 2,000 adults and children receive assistance from the center each year for free. But despite the fact that the organization is a major community resource, many people are unaware that it exists, said Karen Blatcher, information and referral advocate for the

"We are little, but we do a lot," she said. "We aren't social workers:

we're advocates. And we want to educate people, so they can actively live in the community."

Established in 1990, the Lake County Center for Independent Living receives funding through the state and federal governments and provides four core services: independent-living assistance, advocacy, peer counseling, and information and referral support.

The center helps disabled people find affordable housing, create a budget, learn about their legal rights, enter various support groups and obtain the information they need to live productively.

Mentally and physically disabled people can solicit help from the organization, Blatcher said.

She added that the group was governed and run primarily by people with disabilities.

"We can empathize," she said. "If you perceive yourself as having a disability, we agree with you. We help [our consumers] · problem solve, and we give them new ideas."

LIBERTYVILLE - Not many college students would miss their graduation ceremony. But 23-year-old Kristian Gustavson has no reservations about forgoing the event.

Instead of walking across the stage with his classmates in June, Gustavson will be scouting the Mississippi River in preparation of a nearly 900-mile journey that he expects to start later that month.

Gustavson hopes to improve the world by promoting water-quality awareness as he travels down the Mighty Mississippi in a canoe from Pekin, Ill., to New Orleans, La. "I want to illustrate to people that we're living in a watershed, and our actions do have an impact," he satid. "I've been wanting to make this trip a reality since December."

Gustavson, a 2003 graduate of Libertyville High School, spent months studying pollution in the Mississippi River as a student at the University of Sponsorship also is being provided by the San Diego chapter of the SurfRider Foundation, which is a nonprofit organization dedicated to the protection of the world's oceans and beaches.

After researching contamination in the Mississippi River, Gustavson drew the conclusion that pollution in that body of water must affect the Gulf of Mexico and oceans beyond.

"The Mississippi River is the largest watershed in the United States," he said.

"Pretty much everything from the Rocky Mountains to the Appalachian [Mountains] goes into the Mississippi River, which is the most polluted river in the United States That must impact the Gustavson said he planned to spend no more than two months traveling the river for his project, adding that the route he choose was based off an expedition that two of his uncles took in 1966.

Alarm clocks no way to wake up

My alarm clock and I have vastly different ideas of when is the best time to get up.

It begins chirping at me at 5:30 a.m., at which time I promptly pull the sheet back over its cage and go back to sleep.

Most people then would get up about 15 minutes later, after the alarm went off again, louder, even though technically that shouldn't happen. Most people press the snooze button.

I am not most people.

The snooze button is for people who just aren't quite ready to get up. I, however, am definitely not even close to being ready to get up at 5:30 a.m. So, rather than press the snooze button, I pull its cord out from the wall.

This might seem mean, but, seriously, who woke

Now, I'm employed, so I'm not going to sleep until noon, as nice as that might sound. I couldn't sleep until noon even if I wanted. In fact, I'll probably wake up again naturally sometime between 6:30 and 7 a.m.

So, this begs the question, why not just set my alarm clock for 6:30 or 7 a.m.?

Great question! You get a star.

The simple answer is that I hate waking up for good to the sound of an alarm clock. That 5:30 alarm is just a memo to my body that lets it know it should consider getting out of bed sometime in the next hour or two. I enjoy waking up without the help of an electronic banshee. It helps my mood. Both sides of the bed become wrong when an alarm clock is involved.

! The entire concept of the alarm clock is bogus. What a horrendous way of starting the day that we've grown accustom to. Could you imagine people 250 years ago thinking it a good idea to begin what would be a long, work-filled day with a metallic, pulsing sound that's impossible to ignore?

Of course not. They would call us crazy. And then possibly burn us as witches. It just goes to show you that no time period is perfect. The 1750s: No alarm clocks! No unburned witches!

I believe a lot more people were morning people before the advent of the alarm clock. Do you have problems getting out of bed on Saturday, the day that is -most free of the modern-day rooster? Probably not. Waking up naturally just makes you feel better about the upcoming day, and, well, life in general. The Buddha didn't use an alarm clock, and he was a pretty optimistic dude.

Now, I'm sure that many of you are worried about the possibility of being late to work. That alarm clock is the only thing keeping you from starting your work day with a stern lecture from the boss.

And some of you need more time to get ready in the morning. Not everyone is like me, whose morning routine is to get out of bed, stumble into the shower, stumble out, stumble into the closet, hope some clothes find their way onto my body, hope they match, consider breakfast, forego it, and proceed out the door, all in a time span of about 15 minutes.

For most people, the alarm clock is an inescapable, integral part of their morning routine.

So, how do you break free of the charms of the plastic Siren, beckoning you toward a bad mood by getting up at a time that your body certainly didn't agree to? Go to bed earlier.

That's it. Go to bed earlier. Forget Letterman. Say goodbye to Leno. And don't even think about Conan. Go to bed. If you're in bed by 9 p.m., most are going to have a tough time even making it to 7 a.m., with or without an alarm clock.

Early to bed, early to rise, makes a man wealthy, healthy and wise. And a dork, but that can't be helped.

To be honest, I never get to bed as early at 9 p.m. This doesn't mean I'm not a dork. It just means I'm a hypocrite. But I'm a hypocrite who gets out of bed most mornings without the help of the alarm clock. And you should see the smile on my face when I wake up sans buzzing. You should try it. At worst, you'll show up late for work. But at least you'll have a smile on your face while being sternly lectured.

Let's pass new GI bill

The Senate approved a new GI bill late last week that would provide expanded educational benefits to veterans who have served in the armed forces for at least three years. The measure now returns to the

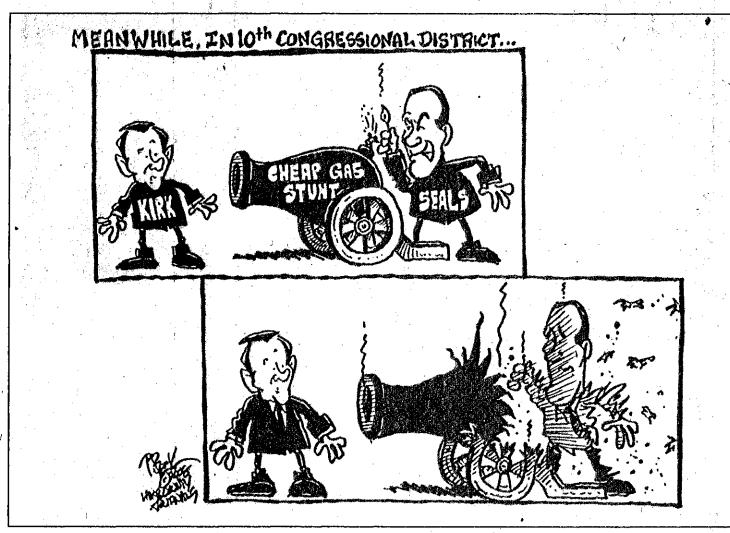

The legislation would apply to veterans who have served in the armed forces since Sept. 11, 2001. It would cover tuition and fees for public universities in any state where the veteran resides. There also would be an allowance for books and housing. Veterans also could use the benefit to help pay tuition at more expensive private institutions. And if private universities offered assistance, the government would provide matching funds.

Critics contend that the bill, which could cost $50 billion during the next 10 years, is too costly. President Bush has threatened to veto the GI bill and to veto an Iraq and Afghanistan war funding measure because of domestic spending add-ons, such as an extension of unemployment benefits.

We do not believe that the expanded educational benefits are too costly.

Gratitude to carriers

To the Editor:

The National Association of Letter Carriers provides an annual service to their communities by collecting donated food items. Locally they deliver those donations to the Libertyville Township Food Pantry. This service takes place as a part of the Letter Carriers' "Stamp Out Hunger Food Drive."

Libertyville Township wishes to express our extreme gratitude to the postal carriers and to the community residents who responded so generously on behalf of our needy township families. The food drive was a tremendous success and we extend our warmest thanks to all who contributed on May 10.

Learning about weather

To the Editor:

Over the past month, the fourth graders at W.C. Petty Elementary School have been studying up on weather. They have learned about weather forecasting, air pressure, temperature, and the water cycle, as well as other topics related to weather.

To celebrate our learning, W.C. Petty invited Mike Caplan from Channel 7 News to come speak to the students. The students were very enthusiastic to learn from a true meteorologist. He taught them more about air pressure, how meteorologists predict weather, changes in weather, and different types of severe weather. The students were excited to go home after school and watch the newscast at 4 p.m. to see Mike Caplan, and Mike came through with his promise to say hello to all the fourth graders at W.C. group of school children with a target and a handgun super-imposed over their heads. The only factual statement on the mailing was that Sandy Cole voted against HB758. There were no quotes from HB758 or a synopsis of the bill. Instead there was verbiage spouting the group's message.

How often do we speak about powerful interest groups bullying our representatives into voting for their bills? We are fortunate to have a representative who reads each bill and makes an informed vote based on the merits of the bill and the wishes or her constituency.

Imagine my surprise when I realized that this group is the gun control lobby. I can only hope that in the future they will put their time and money into promoting better bills instead of using scare tactics on unsuspecting voters. Thank you Sandy Cole for making informed decisions on our behalf. Your voting record over the past 12 years on the Lake County Board and the Illinois Legislature speaks louder than a mud-flinging, campaignstyle flyer. You vote for a bill based on its merits and not because a special interest group is pressuring your vote.

Citizen voices must be heard at forums

For some time, the city of Waukegan has been discussing whether the public comment period, which allows citizens three minutes after regular meetings to air their grievancés should be restricted in any way. The officialdom of Waukegan, has expressed their frustration that the comment period has gotten out of hand with loud and disturbing outbursts that have become disruptive. It got so bad that 2nd Ward

Alderman John Balen made a motion to ban citizen participation at city council meetings. It appeared that the consensus of the council wasn't so much to muzzle the public but to bring a semblance of order and civility to the process.

Even though the Constitution protects freedom of speech first amendment rights to citizens, there are split opinions on whether it is an absolute right at public meetings. Many councils of government hold it to be a privilege to allow citizens to speak out at public meetings and with that privilege comes responsibilities. In other words, there can be reasonable limits on what can be said and the civility by which messages are delivered. It is obvious that the citizen comment periods cannot be disruptive of the serious business of public bodies, and public commenters must recognize that they cannot use that public forum and abuse the privilege by making personal and baseless attacks.

About four years ago, the Lake County Board was similarly disturbed when a former county corrections officer used the public comment period to make excessively abusive remarks against certain county officials and employees.

Because of the tirade, the county was considering restrictions against public comments, but the end result was that the public was allowed to continue to voice their concerns at board meetings although with time constraints and protections against vile and disruptive attacks. I believe that, ever since, behavior of citizens during the audience participation period has been exemplary and public officials have gained insights from the citizen involvement.

It has been unfortunate that there has been some movement among public bodies to totally ban public comment periods. The public participation during official meetings can be categorized in at least three groups. The first are those citizens who have a legitimate and timely concern over the government's proposed action that might negatively impact the quality of life of the community or a neighborhood. Although the message may be short, the public officials are usually attentive because the content carries a common concern among their constituents.

The second grouping are what councils and boards call the "regular gripers and whiners." Many come to every meeting and seem to berate the public officials, and they use the floor to embarrass the elected leaders. But, some of that group have legitimate concerns, and three or so minutes of time isn't too much of a burden on the ears of the officials.

The third grouping might be classified as "political wannabees." They often run for office and often lose. They use the public comment period to get "air time" to foster their own agenda. They usually draw the ire of the officials they target, so that gives them some satisfaction. Some elected officials who never learn how to handle criticism get into tugs of war with these citizens and probably give them more exposure than they deserve.

I have always believed that the public should never be shut out from the public process. It has been my experience that citizens mainly want their voices to be heard. What they detest is when they speak out and elected officials who they probably voted for turn a deaf ear to their concerns or might treat them rudely when all they want is to tell their story. For many citizens, speaking at a public forum may be a first for them and they can be very nervous and emotional about it. The public officials should treat them kindly with respect and listen genuinely to their every word.

By this time, I'm sure that the city of Waukegan has done the right thing and allowed citizens to speak at their forums. 9th Ward Alderman Rafael Rivera said it right when he said we cannot ban or turn off the cameras during audience

All he asks is that both sides be respectful, the people who are speaking and those who are

Keeping an eye on the kids

I recently read an article about parents who hover over their children, staying involved in every aspect of their lives, sometimes even doing their homework or filling out their applications. They are called "helicopter parents."

First used to describe the overbearing parents of college students, the term is now used to describe hovering and overprotective parents with children of any age

I think most of us know there is a line between encouraging complete dependence and keeping an eye on things. I know I would never be tempted to write my child's college entrance essay.

But since becoming a mom, I must fight my urges to be overprotective.

The problem is my vivid imagination makes life seem as fraught with danger as a Lifetime Channel movie of the week

I also think it is healthy for kids to make some of their own decisions.

For example, I never said anything to the boys as they spent months and months of allowance on buying Pokemon cards, Pokemon cards and more Pokemon cards.

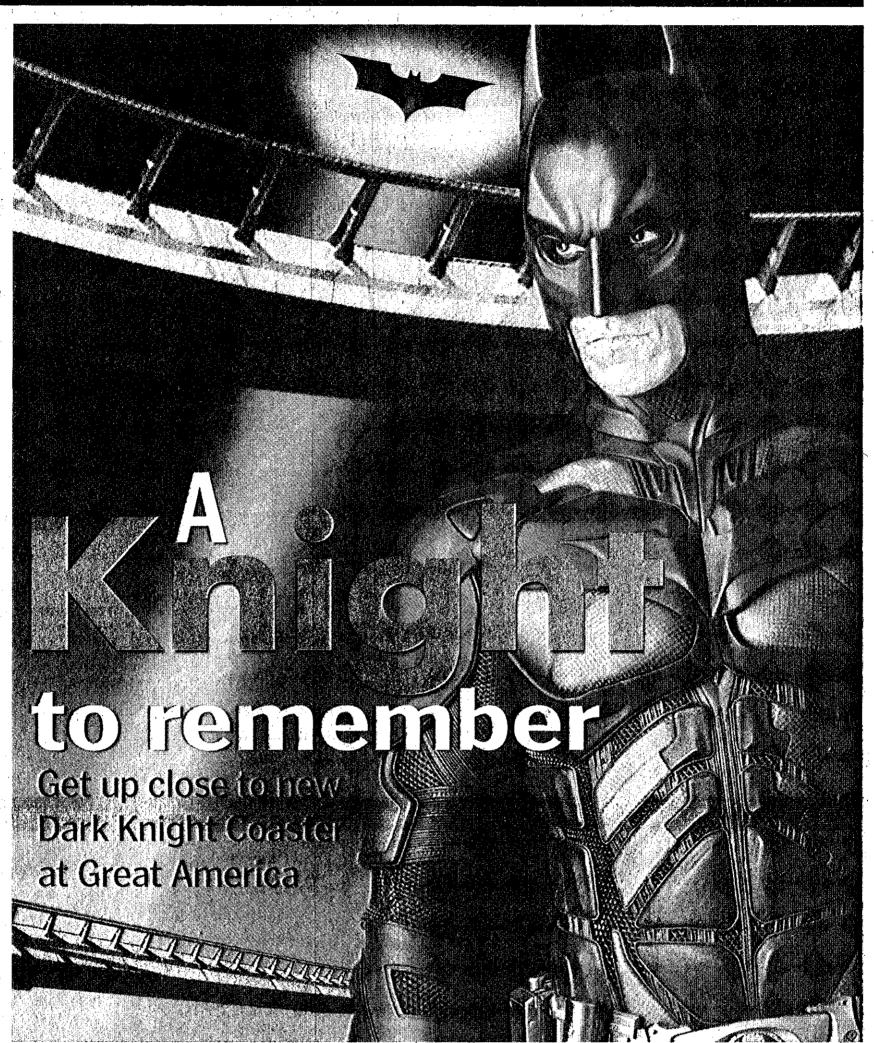

Unfortunately, many of these trading cards met with a tragic end after being left in someone's pants pocket through a trip in the washing machine.

Even though I try not to hover, I still keep watch with that special mom's eye in the back of my head. Because many times when I turn my back, my 6 and 8-year-old sons are doing things that seem ... well ... not too bright.

Daring each other to eat playground sand, for instance, or having a contest to see which one of them can rip their shirt first as they crawl under the trampoline.

As you can see, I am not a helicopter parent, for that would require that I hover. Instead I am usually in the thick of things, minimizing bodily harm or being a "street sweeper parent," trudging behind the action, just in time to clean up a mess!

GURNEE - Hair pin turns. Flashing lights. Intense special effects

Six Flags Great America's newest coaster, The Dark Knight, is a ride unlike any other at the Gurnee theme park.

The coaster is based on Warner Bros. upcoming movie "The Dark Knight" and features the world renowned DC Comics characters Batman and The Joker.

Housed in a seven-story building, the ride blends storytelling and computerization in a state-of-the-art way. The coaster is different than the other rides at Six Flags Great

America, said Brooke Gabbert, public relations manager at the Six Flags

"There are thousands of choreographed elements during the ride," Gabbert said. "I've been on it a dozen times, and every time I've gone on it, I've seen something new."

Those who dare to ride The Dark Night first watch a multi-sensory "newscast" that is disrupted by The Joker. Then they are thrust into darkness and bombarded with fearsome images on the two-minute ride.

After exiting the coaster, park guests Thursday were excitedly talking about The Dark Knight with their friends and family.

The coaster is different than the other rides at Six Flags Great enjoyed riding a coaster in the dark.

THE DARK KNIGHT COASTER TRIVIA

- The Dark Knight Coaster is the first indoor roller coaster at Six Flags Great America.
- The park's other Caped Crusader coaster, Batman: The Ride, was the first inverted roller coaster in the world when it opened in 1992.
- The wait areas feature Gotham City Rail signs and advertisements. The fake signs feature real, working phone numbers and Web sites, which act as if Gotham is a real city.
 Be sure to stop to peek at the security camera at the final turn before entering the subway cars. A virtual clown mask should appear over your face on the screen.

"It was pretty awesome," he said.
"You didn't really see what was coming up. You're just looking at flashing lights and all these surprises."

And 16-year-old Kyle Smith of Rockford said the ride was thrilling after she took a spin on it for the first

"It was freaky," she said.

The Dark Knight Coaster is the first indoor coaster at Six Flags Great America. It cost $7.5 million to build.

Indiana Jones returns for action

Harrison Ford assumes adventurous role again after nearly 2 decades

By JAKE BILINSKI kgresey@nwnewsgroup.com

I've had a plaguing bout of anxiety over the latest Indiana Jones installment for quite awhile now. The franchise is a dearly beloved part of both my childhood and current DVD collection.

I remember as a kid being forbidden to watch "Raiders of the Lost Ark" because my mom thought it would give me nightmares.

Something about peoples' faces melting in it (to which I thought,

When I finally saw it (a few days later, actually) I, like many others, was enthralled by this penultimate hero of the 80s - Dr. Henry "Indiana" Jones. Why was I fretful for the new film you ask? Well, there's the obvious fact that Harrison Ford isn't what one would call youthful these days.

There's the fact that George Lucas is tied to the series, which calls to mind his ruining of the "Star Wars" saga with the latest three heaps of digital dung that were Episodes I, II and III.

And there's nearly 20 years of expectations built up since the last Indiana Jones flick.

Still, I have to admit I was pretty excited to walk into a theater for a fresh dose of the Jones again. But there's no way around it ... the utterly flawed "Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" is a disappointment on several levels ... mostly due to the prairie dogs.

The story finds our whip-slinging hero Indy (Ford) in the nuclear age, pitted against a band of Russian baddies lead by Irina Spalko (Cate Blanchett), who are out to find a mysterious crystal skull, which will bestow great power upon whomever returns it to its proper place amidst a mythical city ... so there.

The acting is moderately decent. Ford steps as comfortably back into Indy's skin as possible, but never quite finds the level of

Writer: David Koepp (story by George Lucas and Jeff Nathanson)

Starring: Harrison Ford, Shia LaBeouf, Cate Blanchett, Karen Allen, John Hurt

charisma his character once harbored. Shia LaBeouf (Transformers, Disturbia) turns in a good performance as Mutt, Indy's sidekick.

I like LaBeouf, but the whole badboy/50s-greaser/biker mold they tried to sell with him isn't a believable fit. Blanchett is at par and makes an apt enough villain, but her character feels extremely underdeveloped, clichéd and one-dimen-

Karen Allen returns to play Marion and has lost pretty much all of the moxy her character once had. Considering the welcome additions of Ray Winstone and John Hurt (and an incredibly wasted Jim Broadbent), it's a shame - a cast this good should've been given better material. And there lies the biggest flaw - the script is just bad. I don't know where to begin.

It's as if Indiana Jones grew stronger and more agile with age. It's the same issue as with the latest "Die Hard" flick – our hero once battled and fought not because he wanted to, but because he had to.

Now, it's as if old age prompted a desire to delve into the most insanepossible scenarios.

Whereas the Indy in Raiders would pull out his gun to quickly off a sword-wielding adversary thus avoiding a long fight, the Indy in "The Kingdom of the Crystal Skull" enjoys swinging from the ceiling by his whip to jump onto speeding vehicles, jumping from one truck to the another while racing through the jungle as standing swordfights transpire between said vehicles, falling over three gargantuan waterfalls without a scratch, and the like.

Oh, and apparently Indy can survive standing on a nearby hill to. watch the mushroom cloud of an atomic bomb detonation he just lived through. (I'm banking the radiation is what gave him his old-age superpowers.)

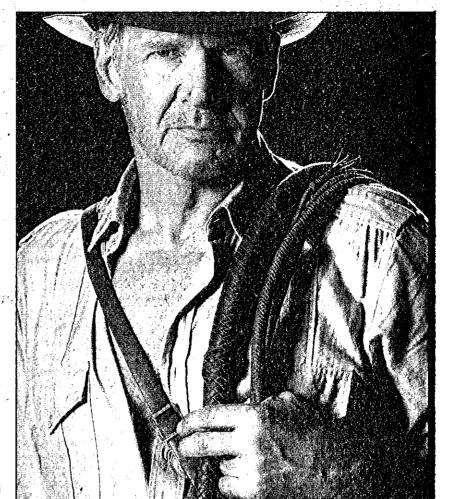

I'm of the mind Steven Spielberg is a sound filmmaker, and I greatly respect him. But he's allowed too much flashy, computer-generated imagery to populate Indy's world. The effects overwhelm the often unmotivated, ridiculous action pieces, cheap excuses for indulgent specta-

A lot of the chaos, which Indy and crew navigate devoid of bodily harm, looks fake and kitchy - especially in the jungle scenes When you consider the heavy-handed digital effects, and Janusz Kaminski's blown-out, very modern cinematography (read: I do consider the man fantastic behind the lens), this simply does not feel like an Indiana Jones film. And that's the biggest shame of all. I leave a lot of the blame to George Lucas's influence.

Whether it's the shoddily computer-generated prairie dogs of which we get three reaction shots of (gag me), the ridiculous Tarzanesque sequence with LaBeouf vineswinging through the jungle with dozens of CG monkeys that seem to obey his will and attack the bad guys, the super-smart man-eating ants, or the over-the-top finale (when did Indy go sc-fi?), this romp is loaded with nauseatingly bad moments that seemed to crack up most of the people in my audience.

Spielberg and Lucas have dug low to appeal to the lowest common denominator of moviegoer here.

And also, without trying to ruin anything, the ending is a cop out. We neither get a proper send-off for Indy, or any evidence of a torchpassing to Mutt (I'd heard LaBeouf was potentially being groomed to carry on the series).

I guess in terms of an Indiana Jones movie, I just expected more than a "Live Free or Die Hard" take on the Brendan Frasier "Mummy" flicks with a dash of "Stargate' thrown in for good measure.

Still ... I do have to admit I was rather entertained by the flick, as far as mindless summer blockbusters go - which proved to me that Spielberg can make a decent action flick without even really trying.

But I can't help mourning for what could've been. I suppose we'll never know... not until Lucas decides to do a spin-off featuring those stupid prairie dogs (I really wouldn't put it past him).

Come on guys, you can do so much better.

Coaster captures mind

By BRYAN WAWZENEK and ROB CARROLL sidetracks@nwnewsgroup.com

• The Dark Knight Coaster might as well be called the Dark as Night Coaster.

It is made to look like portions of the Gotham City railway that have been hijacked by The Joker.

Earlier this month, we were among the first to try out Great America's first major coaster since Superman: Ultimate Flight opened in 2003. After winding through the rows of standard amusement park metal bars, we entered the pre-show area (a first for any coaster at Six Flags). The area is more typical of what is found in Disney and Universal theme park attractions. This is where the ride gets tied to "The Dark Knight" movie - due in July and featuring Christian Bale, Heath Ledger and Aaron Eckhart.

Eckhart.
Eckhart, who plays district attorney Harvey Dent, even appeared as his film character in the pre-show video, a staged press conference discussing the strange occurrences in the Gotham subway. Dent assured us everything was fine, right as the screen went fuzzy and we heard the unsettling cackle of Batman's most famous adversary. Now fully immersed in the Batman universe, it was our turn to ride The Joker's demented railway.

We strapped ourselves into the ride's mini subway cars and began our uphill journey. After that, the roller coaster was a non-stop mix of tight turns and steep drops, most of which we didn't see coming in the darkness.

Although we enjoyed The Dark Knight Coaster's lightning-quick turns and Gotham City ambiance, we felt that the $7.5 million ride wasn't quite in the same league as Great America's marquee coasters, such as Raging Bull.

To be just, we were told that the park considers The Offbeat musical 'Avenue Q' enlivens theater scene

By TOM WITOM thomaswitom@yahoo.com

Five years after its opening on Broadway, Tony Award-winning "Avenue Q" has finally made it to Chicago, albeit for a short stop. But the wait for this adult musical, sidetracked by a long Las Vegas run, was worth it.

Set in an unnamed, off-the-mainstream New York borough, the musical features onstage performers with uninhibited hand puppets and a few captivating special effects. It's on a block with a tenement occupied by a collection of dispirited tenants variously struggling with a tough job market, sexual identity and depression. The opening number, "It Sucks To Be Me," sums things up perfectly.

"Avenue Q" comes with lively music and quirky lyrics by Robert Lopez and Jeff Marx, a play book by Jeff Whitty, and likable puppets by Rick Lyon, who, along with Marx, once worked for the PBS show "Sesame Street." The touring company, here as part of Broadway in Chicago, also includes a fine ensemble directed by Jason Moore.

Tickets, please

on Avenue Q.

Show information: 312-902-1400

It starts with Princeton (Robert McClure), a freshly minted college grad, complaining in "What Do You Do with a B.A. in English?" that "You can't pay bills yet / no skills yet." He's looking for a cheap place to rent and finds it

Among other residents are shy assistant kindergarten teacher Kate Monster (Kelli Sawyer in both roles); a gay couple, Rod (McClure) and Nicky (David Benoit, who also handles the roles of the Internet porn-loving Monster and two mischief-making Bad Idea Bears). Christmas Eve (Angela Ai) is hilarious as an unstrung Japanese psychologist who has trouble hanging onto clients. She and her fiancé Brian (Cole Porter, who switched with understudy Cullen Titmas during the second half of the show on opening night), an aspiring late-night TV comedian, join others in "Everyone's a Little Bit Racist," bemoaning the fate life has dealt them.

"Avenue Q" with its R-rated lyrics and adult theme is unsuitable for children. However, the Generation X crowd in particular will readily identify with some of the struggles encountered by its puppet and human characters.

Good news keeps coming

Boys track wrapped up its season over the Memorial Day weekend, and even though it's all over, let's not forget the hard work the athletes put in to get there.

The only athlete who placed from the Lake County Journals coverage area was Nick Lane of Grayslake North. Lane finished 11th in the IHSA Class AA 3200-meter run with a time of 9:20.20.

I didn't get a chance to go to Charleston and talk to Lane, but when I did a profile on Matt McCulley, an assistant track coach at Grayslake North, I got an understanding of the effort Lane puts into his game.

Lane would train with McCulley, who was training to run in the Boston Marathon.

Well, it looks like it paid off, because 11th in the state finals is nothing to sneeze at.

Boys tennis also wrapped up its season this weekend, and it looks like Warren came home as the big winner in the Lake County Journals coverage area. The Blue Devils did what seniors Igor Fedorov and Konrad Siczek wanted them to do – finish in the top 10. And they did that by finishing sixth at the state tournament in Arlington Heights. Warren tied for sixth with Chicago Latin.

Bogatov defeated Eric Spector of Glenbrook North going 7-6 (5), 7-5. Congratulations to Bogatov for Warren's No. 1 doubles team of Fedorov and Siczek were named to third team all-state and were top 24 in state. The duo lost in the sixth round of the consolation bracket to Dan Ballantine and Ian Tesmond of Hinsdale Central. Singles player Jon Donnowitz lost in the third round of the consolation bracket to Jacob Tanulanoud of Andrew in Tinley Park.

Other players who made the trip to Arlington Heights were the doubles team Andrew Buccholz and Chris Butler of Carmel. The two lost in the fourth round on the consolation bracket to Kevin Prescott and Teddy Gates of Chicago Latin.

And Lakes doubles team of Charlie Scupham and Justin Shea lost in the second round of the consolation bracket to Michael Savino and Matthew Schutt of Benet Academy.

Congratulations to all of those who went to state, and great job all the hard work you put in this season.

An unforgettable coach

Carmel remembers beloved wrestling coach Joe Scordino

By JESSICA JACOBSEN jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

MUNDELEIN – Talking to friends and coworkers of longtime Carmel wrestling coach Joe Scordino, one thing is constant – he was about the kids.

Scordino, 61, died May 16 in his Gurnee home, and even though he had emphysema, diabetes and his health had gotten worse, his death still came as a shock to the Carmel community. One of those shocked include his longtime wrestling assistant and current Carmel wrestling coach Bob Kuykendall.

"We just didn't expect him to be gone," he said. Kuykendall and Scordino's working relationship spanned 26 of Scordino's 34 years of teaching at Carmel Catholic High School.

"He was a lot like my father," Kuykendall said. Kuykendall began teaching at Carmel when he was 22 years old, and he says one of the reasons he stayed on as an assistant for so long was the loyalty he had for Scordino. That loyalty developed from Scordino's teaching style.

"He basically mentored and taught the way he thought to be a coach,"

Kuykendall said.

But that drive didn't end with mentoring, Kuykendall said. Scordino applied the same energy when it came to coaching his wrestlers.

"Joe was a pretty basic guy," Kuykendall said. "He wanted one thing ... he wanted you to be the best you could be."

By doing that, Scordino would leave a lasting effect on his students and wrestlers.

"He had a positive impact on their lives," Kuykendall said.

And no one knows that better than Carmel Athletic Director Andy Bitto. Bitto has known Scordino since Scordino was Bitto's coach on the freshman football team.

"I've known him for 31 years," Bitto said. Scordino was even Bitto's cooperation teacher when he came back to Carmel to teach.

Bitto described Scordino as a guy who told you exactly what he wanted and expected it. But he also described him as a tender guy who would help a kid get into college.

"This was his family," Bitto said. "I think he felt like the patriarch of wrestling."

Another person who will miss Scordino is his

Another person who will miss Scordino is his close friend and Carmel's director of campus ministry, Mike Fitzgibbons.

"He was a great man," Fitzgibbons said. "He'll be missed."

Fitzgibbons and Scordino knew each other for 32 years, dating back to when Fitzgibbons was Scordino's assistant for the freshman football team.

Warren student racing with excitement

Olson looking forward to senior season in both track, cross country

By JESSICA JACOBSEN jjacobsen@nwnewsgroup.com

GURNEE - Many students don't look forward to the physical fitness tests in gym class. But Warren's Heather Olson isn't most students.

Olson, 17, and a junior, recently placed fourth in the 1600-meter run in Illinois girls track state finals with a time of 4:57.31. Her success with running dates back grade school.

"We used to do the mile run in gym class like as a physical fitness test in grade school, and I always did well at that and I looked forward to it," she said. "So, when I learned you could run for a sport it was exciting. I just started with track in middle school and went from there."

But Olson's running accolades don't end with her fourth-place finish in the 1600 meter run. She also placed seventh in state for cross country earlier this year with a time of 17:24.

With her success in both track and cross country, one might think it is hard for Olson to pick a favorite. But Olson's inability to pick which she likes more comes from completely different thought process.

"They're so different, so I don't really know. I like things about both of them," Olson said. "I like being outside with the course and stuff with cross country, and I like the competitive tight atmosphere of track. So, it's good to have both."

Picking her most memorable athletic moment is a little easier for Olson – her fourth-place finish at

"I think this last race for track was probably the highlight so far. It was just a really close race and really competitive, and it was exciting to come around the bend and be just one place behind the leader and to see the leader – probably 10 yards in front of me," Olson said. "It's just a really exciting feeling, and I've never been that close before, so it was really something new and exciting."

Olson's success with the Blue Devils has her thinking about competing at the collegiate level. Though she doesn't know where she wants to go just yet, she is excited by the idea of competing on that level.

"I'm really excited about prospects for college and thinking about continuing running for college," Olson said. "I think it'll be a really awesome way to expand on what I've done in high school and basically a whole new competitive arena and I'm excited about it."

Olson's athleticism isn't something new for her family. Her mom used to play softball in high school, and her dad did cross country skiing. Olson also has some running relatives. Her cousins in South Carolina have both placed in state there. One cousin took third in the 800-meter run this year and last year, and his sister placed first in the 4x800 meter. "I guess the running has been influenced by my cousin," Olson said.

Another aspiration of Olson's is to compete in marathons or even ultra-marathons, which are about 50 miles, she said.

"I've been told you shouldn't run marathons early, too early because it'll take the speed out of legs," Olson, said. "So, I'll probably hold off until after college."

But college and marathon running are second to Olson preparing for next season where hopes to only improve on her success. To get ready for cross country, Olson said, she will do strength training and continue to run. When track season approaches, she will still do strength training, but will be doing more speed work in preparation.

And with next year being Olson's last year at Warren, she is excited.

"It's kind of fun to be where I am now and to have built up to this point. I'm definitely looking forward to next year to try to do some really great things, and I'm excited about it, so I'm looking forward to next year," Olson said.

Bitto said Scordino wouldn't have wanted them to make a fuss, but the community still wanted to honor him with a memorial and serving his favorite dish – pizza.

"He loved pizza," Bitto said. But the memorial might not be the only way the school honors Scordino, who was part of the inaugural hall of fame inductees for the East Suburban Catholic Conference in 2006.

Kuykendall said there have been discussions about having a night to honor him at the beginning of wrestling season or the players wearing his initials on their uniforms.

Sturgeon Bay big on smallmouth fishing, adventure

I answered my phone and heard Mike Bonadonna say, "Sturgeon Bay smallmouth fishing is world class. People talk about Chequamegon Bay in Wisconsin off of Lake Superior and about the Lake Erie smallmouth bite, but I tell you, Steve, Sturgeon Bay beats them both. Would you like to run up there with me for a couple of days?"

I told him I would have to think about it. I thought about it – for about three seconds – before excitedly replying with a resounding "Yes."

Bonadonna works for Sportco Marketing, the Midwest rep company for Shimano products. In addition to world-class smallmouth action, I was going to use Mike's rods and reels that I was certain would be better than anything I owned. Those factors made my decision easy.

The 3 12-hour drive is an easy one. We met up with Shimano Pro Staffers, Tim Schneider of Silver Lake, Wis., and Steve Garcia of Lindenhurst, at the Little Sturgeon Bay public ramp. Mike and I would split up and fish with one of the pros and then switch partners for day 2. Schneider and Garcia were at Schneider and Garcia were at Sturgeon Bay to pre-fish for the Sturgeon Bay Open Bass Tournament. The open is one of the Midwest's most prestigious contests, awarding a purse worth more than $50,000 to the winning team. There is a waiting list to become one of the event's 200 teams allowed to fish. Some famous names show up to vie for the big prize every year.

I was pleased to be hooked up with Schneider and Garcia. They are not partners. Schneider fishes with Greg Dickson, proprietor of Triangle Bait and Tackle in Antioch, and Garcia pairs up with Joe Tholl. Schneider and Dickson were the open's winners in 2006, and Garcia and Tholl hauled in the biggest bass weighed in on day 1 of last year's big event.

The launch at Little Sturgeon Bay

The launch at Little Sturgeon Bay was top-notch. I got in Schneider's boat, and we headed out. The water temperature was 48 degrees, not a good sign. We worked shallow water, anywhere from one to five feet deep. Schneider kept an eye on his electronics and soon was happy to see the No. 52 pop up on the screen when we glided toward a protected shoreline.

Almost immediately, Schneider had a smallie on his line. We were fishing plastics. Tube jigs were the preferred approach. We used dark-colored jigs in combos of brown, green and purple mounted on light-weight jig heads. Schneider boated the first smallie and it appeared to be a strong 3 pounds. It fought hard and quickly was unhooked and released.

In short order, I had my first smallie on the line. It was a nice 3pound fish that was deeply colored, thick and solid. from the southeast. We were blown off the water by 3 p.m. I was disappointed we had to leave, but we caught plenty of fish in our limited opportunity. I was awed to see that there were absolutely no small fish caught. I joked that Sturgeon Bay smallies must hatch from their nests weighing at least 2 pounds!

I hit the water with Garcia on day 2. He kept in contact with his partner via phone, and they related to each other where they were fishing, what baits they were using and any success they were having. Schneider and Dickson did the same. Most tournament pairs bring up two boats in order to pre-fish double the amount of spots and also in case the big pond does damage to one of the boats.

Garcia and I hit all of the productive spots from day 1 with limited success. We worked tubes again. We altered our game plan and moved deeper. Again, the success was limited. By trip's end, Garcia and I had spent a lot of time with a mere handful of fish between us. When we met up with Bonadonna and Schneider we were astounded to find that they had found the smallies in eight feet of water, but the secret to success was switching to Lucky Strike stick baits. They nailed more than 25 smallies including Schneider's 5 nounder cluding Schneider's 5 pounder.

P'll go back to Sturgeon Bay again.
You can fish the bay side or test the waters of Lake Michigan. You can clabble south or cruise north all the way to the tip of Door County – Washington Island. It would take forever to hit every spot that appeared productive. You'll need a good boat and excellent navigational skills if you venture to Sturgeon Bay. It's big water and can become violent with little to no warning. From what I saw, in terms of smallmouth fishing, it definitely is worth the effort.

Trust The Vacuum Experts

Owner Rudy Vega said he's able to service almost any brand of vacuum cleaner. He also said that he carries only quality vactium cleaners that hold up well based on my experience." Rudy explained that today many vacuum cleaners in the $150 to $200 price range have a maximum life of only 5 years because they're made of cheaper plastic components. "I choose vacuum cleaners with good components," Vega said. "You may pay a little more, but they hold up a lot longer."

Conveniently located across from Ace Hardware on Peterson Road in Libertyville, Vacuum Experts carries name brand canister, upright, and broom vacuum cleaners, such as Miele, Electrolux, Riccar, Sanitaire, Carpet Pro, Fuller Brush, Panasonic, and Dyson. Vega noted that he sells vacuums with HEPA filtration systems to maintain indoor air quality in today's tightly insulated homes.

Vacuum Experts also sells, installs, and services central vacuums, as well as offering carpet cleaning machines and in-room air filters. In addition, Rudy said that they sell, install, and service reliable Nutone home intercom

Bears shouldn't be in rush to sign Urlacher

Something will get done between the Bears and Brian Urlacher. Contract standoffs between teams and players of Urlacher's stature get resolved somehow, some way. They just do (except in the case of Terrell Owens, who is half-crazy).

It could get ugly in the glare of the media spotlight if Urlacher stays away for part of training camp.

But it won't go much further than that. Until then, expect more pointless posturing from a player who hasn't seemed to like his job much since the Bears lost Super Bowl XLI.

The negative vibes were apparent in comments Urlacher recently made to Yahoo Sports, saying he expects to skip the mandatory mini-camp at the end of this month because of dissatisfaction with his contract:

"I don't understand what they're doing," he said of the Bears.

What they're doing is prioritizing. Defensive tackle Tommie Harris will be a free agent after next season and, based on age, is a more important player than Urlacher. The Bears can keep Harris by using the franchise-player tag, but all parties would rather have a multi-year deal Devin Hester has two years remaining on his rookie contract and is more underpaid than Urlacher, who has four years

Nick Hut

After Harris, the Bears will tackle the difficult task of reaching an agreement with the best return specialist of all time.

It is not as though the Bears have ignored Urlacher. They offered him a oneyear extension that would have dropped an extra $5 million in his lap immediately and potentially boosted his base salaries by $1 million a season. Still, Urlacher made some reasonable points in the story.

The salary cap is much higher than it was when he signed his nine-year, $57 million contract in 2003.

His dollar value has not grown accordingly. Moreover, as Urlacher said, the Bears could cut him at any point because NFL contracts are not guaranteed.

Players, then, should have the right to renegotiate if they have outplayed the value of their deal.

At the same time, that is the trade-off guys maké when they decide to play pro football for a living.

Urlacher and his agent also could have negotiated voidable years into the deal if they thought he might want to tear the thing up eventually.

Nobody is crying for Urlacher, who made $13 million the moment he signed his name to that contract.

He made $4 million the past two seasons and is set to make $4 million again this season, $5 million in 2009 and more than $6 million each in 2010-11.

If Urlacher is worried about his health, whether neck and back issues will knock him out of the game, plenty of people would understand his stance.

But in the mercenary world of pro football, his health is exactly the reason the Bears should not rush into anything

As is always the case, this also is about pride. Urlacher knows 11 NFL linebackers made a bigger base salary than he did

He told Yahoo, "If you're a chairbuilder, and you feel you're the best at what you do, and other chair-builders are making more than you, then you'd want to be paid more, too."

That was Urlacher's way of trying to appeal to the average fan who has trouble sympathizing with his stance. Good luck with that, Brian.
